Single-use protective gloves are indispensable in many areas of the working world and global demand has risen sharply.

Even before the coronavirus pandemic, an estimated 300 billion disposable gloves were used every year, generating a corresponding amount of glove waste as a result.

Consumption of conventional nitrile gloves per person:

10 pieces/day
200 pieces/month
2.400 pieces/year

(based on: 280 working days per year)

This corresponds to a saving of at least 80 %, yielding a significant reduction in glove waste. In addition, there are huge cost savings due to the longer service life of Flex Grip nitrile gloves.

On average, Flex Grip nitrile gloves last five to eight times longer than ordinary disposable nitrile gloves.

Prolonged use leads to considerably less waste and greatly reduces the environmental impact.

Consumption of conventional Flex Grip nitrile gloves per person:

2 pieces/day
40 pieces/month
480 pieces/year

(based on: 280 working days per year)
